

SALON PRIVÉ

MAGAZINE

Study and Work in Style: Luxury Working Spaces in NYC

by STAFF WRITER

In today's bustling world, where students and remote/hybrid workers navigate their way through the year, the quest for private, convenient, and inspiring spaces for work and study becomes paramount.

In-unit studio spaces offer the perfect blend of solitude and convenience, carving out a tranquil work environment within the familiarity of one's home. These spaces provide a sanctuary for focused work and study, eliminating the need to jostle for in-unit workspace or endure the daily commute to the office.

Below, we explore some remarkable in-unit spaces and co-working areas within buildings that aim to ignite creativity and enhance productivity for residents across New York City.

77 Greenwich – Elevating Urban Living

Situated in Manhattan's "New Downtown," 77 Greenwich redefines upscale urban living with its boutique approach. The architectural brilliance of FXCollaborative and interiors by Deborah Berke Partners infuse the units with luxury and attention to detail.

Image: Evan Joseph Photography

Amenities at 77 Greenwich include a gym, children's playroom, dining room, and a spacious lounge with captivating city and waterfront views, including the iconic Statue of Liberty and Freedom Tower. Shared amenity spaces cater to young residents seeking an enhanced level of productivity for homework and collaborative projects. Additionally, 77 Greenwich residences offer dedicated study spaces within the apartments, providing the ultimate convenience for work or study at home.